Hirobaku's
little brother (Not an otaku, terrible at games)

Nifuji Naoya

Calling him "not an otaku" is an understatement. Doesn't know any of the popular internet slang or memes. He responds to messages quickly all day, but not to Narumi's extent as it's unlikely for him to read them past 10pm (his bedtime). He plays various mobile games due to his friend's influence, but he's terrible at all of them (He still enjoys playing them!) It should go without saying that he can't touch-type and only uses his index fingers.

Naoya's college friend
(Introvert)

Sakuragi Kou

The way she gets absorbed in games bears an uncanny resemblance to a certain someone. Doesn't use any social media sites or apps. Her messages tend to be very long, as if she carefully collected all her thoughts before writing them down. As a result, it takes her a while to send a response since she ends up revising them over and over.

"Sorry" and "apologize" always come up first as suggestions when she starts typing. The anxiety she feels from having to send messages or make phone calls is akin to having a heart attack.

Thanks for helping me again, Kou-kun!

I think I'm starting to get the hang of this game, thanks to all your help!

Read

I mean, I do still kinda suck at it, though.

I'm always amazed by how good you are... I want to be at least half as good as you someday. (> <) I'll do my best!

You asleep?

Anyway, be sure to come visit me at Starbucks again! (^v^*) / Good night!

Likewise. I think getting used to it is the hardest part. I'm not that good. Please do your best. Sorry, I'm not used to using my phone like this, so I can't reply as fast as you. I'm not going to sleep yet, but good night to you as well.

I will visit again.
